

W. W. Armstrong who left for Ely, Nev., during the week, will make the trip from the last train stop to Ely in an automobile. It is said that the road is splendid, even at this time of year, and that in fact the automobile way to the great copper camp is the best.

The auto car recently purchased by Dr. Beaty is working like a charm.

The Denver Sun has an automobile story which has a local interest. It concerns the Packard, and the Sun says:

"Charles Bilz, representing the Packard car in Denver, reports he has disposed of his allotment of four. The last one went to H. Livingston Senter, of Colorado Springs, this week, and has been delivered. This is an evidence that this territory has customers for good, high-priced cars—these selling at $4,500 each. Mrs. D. H. Moffat's car is expected here either tomorrow or next day. Mr. Senter's car was driven to the Springs through the great blizzard of this week, but behaved elegantly, plowing through drifts and cutting the wind as if no obstacles were encountered.

THE MITCHELL.

The Mitchell runabouts, for which Mr. George T. Odell secured the agency for the Consolidated Wagon & Machine Company during his recent eastern trip, have arrived, and Mr. Harry Elliott, manager of the automobile department has been busy for a couple of days demonstrating the qualities of the many improvements on this beautiful little car.

There are many things of especial interest to the autoist in this 1906 model of the Mitchell. For instance, the two vertical engines are now in front, a decided advantage over other runabouts, and the way this substantial machine can go is little less than marvelous.

It is one of the easiest riding cars made today, and the demand for these convenient time savers will undoubtedly exceed the supply this season.

The Mitchell runabout is just the machine for those who want a good car at a reasonable price.

A Chicago anarchist declared in a public speech that Herr Most is now "clad in the robes of immortality." Must be made of asbestos cloth.

The Electrical Show this week has been a most interesting and instructive affair, and it is to be hoped that it will be made an annual event. Every booth was notable for the excellence of the display, and the novelty features of the show were of the highest standard of excellence.

It is said that the organs of healthy apes can be used to replace diseased organs in man. If this be true, many of us would protest against the transposition in cases of diseased brain. We would rather be demented drivers than dawdling duds.

Dr. Wiley's discovery that a large percentage of whisky is made of prune juice may afford a clue to the origin of the phrase, "You're full of prunes."

There will soon be anarchy in the air, but it will be harmless. Herr Most's ashes are to be scattered to the four winds.

The name of a candidate for clerk of the Grand Rapids police court is named Nik; and Nik will no doubt kik if he fails to win out.
